U.S. Warships Received Orders Oct. 11, 1941, To Destroy Nazi And Italian Forces, Stark Says

"Shooting Order" Was Issued by Direction of Roosevelt, Pearl Harbor Group Is Told

By WILLIAM T. PEACOCK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—Adm. Harold R. Stark related today that American warships in the Atlantic gave orders October 11, 1941, to destroy "German and Italian naval and air forces encountered," and were then operating at times under direction of British officers.

He told the Pearl Harbor investigating committee that as chief of naval operations he issued the orders to the dissolved organizations to be seized and held by the government. All records are to be seized and opened to the public. Lists of members since July 7, 1937, must be submitted to the supreme Allied commander. That date marked the beginning of the undeclared Sino-Japanese war.

Far-Reaching Directive

MacArthur went much further than merely ordering the Japanese to oust those Japanese who had a hand in affairs which ended in

Mexican Troops Fire On Crowd; 2 Persons Are Reported Killed

LEON, Mexico, Jan. 3 (AP)—A Mexican army officer said tonight that twenty-three persons were killed and thirty-three hospitalized after troops fired upon a crowd of thousands last night in front of the municipal palace.

Unofficial witnesses said there were other dead at homes and that the injured ran above 300. The Red Cross earlier today said it had treated more than 300, nearly all for bullet wounds.

Troops guarded the city hall, patrolled the city square and some streets, and business places were closed.

Secretary of Interior Primo Villa Michel and State's Attorney General Ernesto Gallardo came here today to investigate the affair.

Col. Luis Olvera Barron, commanding the garrison, who gave out the casualty list, asserted the crowd attacked, supposedly trying to storm the municipal palace.

Butter Shortage Will Continue; Allotment for Civilians Is Cut

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—Butter may be harder to find in some parts of the country during the first quarter of this year than at any time since early in the war when heavy military buying depleted supplies.

This prospect was indicated by an Agriculture department announcement today that 30,000,000 pounds less have been allotted civilians for the January-March period than was allocated them for the October-December period. The allotment for the current quarter is 369,000,000 pounds.

Shortages are expected to be most noticeable in the East, the West and in other areas distant from major producing areas of the midwest. Complicating the situation is the absence of rationing, which was used during the war to spread supplies.

The supply picture is expected to become brighter in the April-June quarter. During winter months milk production drops off sharply, but it increases in the spring. The department has tentatively allocated civilians about 470,000,000 pounds for the April-June quarter.

Despite a record milk production year, the output of butter in recent months has been only at about pre-war average. Failure of butter production to keep pace with that of milk reflects the diversion of a larger than the normal portion of butter fat into other dairy products, including cream sold to civilians.

This was disclosed tonight by the War department. It released a report on biological warfare which said that the biological scientists in this country, Britain and Canada, like those who developed the atom bomb, forged ahead of their Axis competitors.

WE Strike May Presage Tie-up Of Phone Service

Telephone Workers Are Asked To Authorize Sympathy Walkout

By The Associated Press

A national shutdown of telephone service was threatened yesterday (Thursday) when a union president called on the nation's telephone workers to authorize a sympathy strike.

The request, from Joseph A. Birne, head of the independent National Federation of Telephone Workers, was made to members of forty-eight unions in the federation.

He asked them to authorize a walkout in sympathy with a strike which started yesterday in twenty-one plants of the Western Electric Company in New York city and Northern New Jersey, affecting 17,000 employees.

The federation claims about 260,000 members and Birne said any strike by them would affect 350,000 Bell System employees. He estimated the poll would require about ten days.

Western Electric is a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, manufactures telephone switchboards for the Bell Telephone System, another subsidiary.

Company Would Mediate

A spokesman for the Western Electric Employees Association, whose members are demanding a thirty per cent wage increase, said support would be sought from other unions in twenty-three plants on the West coast, Hawthorne, Ill., Baltimore and Havertown, Mass.

All the unions are affiliated with the federation.

The company, which has offered a fifteen per cent increase, agreed to consider mediation by "any agency of the federal government" but Henry Mayer, union lawyer, said the strikers were not interested. He alleged the company was attempting to limit the scope of the union's proposal for a fact-finding investigation.

New disputes threatened to cut deeper into the nation's reconversion schedules and run the number of idle to a million and a half within a few weeks.

Major disputes besides the threatened telephone strike include a strike of 700,000 steel workers called for January 14; a strike of 200,000 meat packing industry employees set for January 16 and a strike of 200,000 electrical workers at a date not yet set.

Such strikes in addition to the 400,000 already idle in labor disputes would boost the figure to well over a million and a half.

Reds Accept Plan To Use Marshall As Peace Mediator

By SPENCER MOOSA

CHUNGKING, Jan. 3 (AP)—Chinese Communists accepted today Chiang Kai-Shek's plan to use Gen. George C. Marshall as a mediator but charged the generalissimo had unleashed a large-scale invasion of strategic Jehol province even as he talked of peace.

They said government troops had burst as much as thirty miles into the northern province from Western Manchuria at two points on a seven-five-mile front, seizing the railway cities of Fusin and Chao-

The government, which previously had announced capture of both cities, asserted its troops simply were taking over the province, lying between Manchuria and strong Communist positions in Inner Mongolia, and that the Communists had no strength in the whole area.

The grim testimony, which disturbed the still calm of two Nazi generals among the twenty-two German leaders on trial, was given by SS Maj. Dieter Wisliceny and by slight, 38-year-old Maj. Gen. Otto Ohlendorf, trusted aide of Heinrich Himmler and a member of the SS since his youth.

"Lord Haw Haw," Hitler's Papers Reveal Hess Got Peace Overture

By GLENN WILLIAMS

LONDON, Jan. 3 (AP)—Defiant to the last, William Joyce, 40, American-born Nazi propagandist better known as "Lord Haw Haw," died in the hangman's noose today for deserting England in war and pleading for Hitlerism.

Afterward, his brother, Quentin, said Joyce had given him this last statement:

"In death as in life I defy the Jews who caused this last war. I am proud to die for my ideals and I am sorry for the sons of Britain who have died without knowing why."

Joyce dropped through the trap at 9:03 a. m. (4:03 a. m. EST) clad in the same blue serge suit he wore when British officers captured him in Germany seven months and six days ago.

A crowd of about 250 stood outside Wadsworth prison—quiet except for an occasional cry of "Jairnay calling" in mimicry of the manner in which Joyce opened his broadcasts from Berlin.

Major disputes besides the threatened telephone strike include a strike of 700,000 steel workers called for January 14; a strike of 200,000 meat packing industry employees set for January 16 and a strike of 200,000 electrical workers at a date not yet set.

By DANIEL DE LUCE

NUERNBERG, Jan. 3 (AP)—Adolf Hitler's secret papers contain the assertion that "important English circles" conveyed a peace feeler to a representative of Rudolf Hess a month before Hess flew to England in May, 1941, in his vain attempt to end the German-British war, it was said.

Dr. Albrecht Haushofer, Hess's intimate adviser, sat down at Oberalzberg May 25, 1941, within forty-eight hours after his friend's departure, and wrote Hitler a full account of his own peace overtures, in which he said he used a prominent Swiss official of the International Red Cross as an intermediary.

This 1,400-word confidential report, now in the possession of Allied and neutral intelligence, listed more than a dozen names of Britons mostly titled with whom Haushofer believed a rapprochement possible.

The report said Haushofer as early as September, 1940, wrote a letter to the Duke of Hamilton at Hess's request, in an attempt to establish "contact."

The report attributed to a "moderate group in England" a readiness in April, 1941, to talk peace on a three-point basis: recognition of Britain's paramount interest in Greece but other nominal interests elsewhere in Eastern and South-Eastern Europe; restoration of occupied Western European states; and confinement of German colonial demands to former German territory along with modification of Italian demands.

Also in the possession of Allied intelligence is the original of a message Haushofer sent to Hess September 19, 1940, advising him in almost detective magazine terms of how to surmount the difficulties of getting information through to the Duke of Hamilton.

The dead were identified as: John E. Moran, about 38, HOLC employee and former navy photographer's mate; Mrs. Betty Moran, his wife; Betty Jane, 17, a student at Holy Cross Academy; Patricia, 15, student at Woodrow Wilson high school, Washington, D. C., and Charlotte, 11, Kensington elementary school student.

Firemen said all gas outlets in the house were turned off. Authorities ordered digging in the basement to find the source of gas which filled the house when rescue crews entered it.

The five apparently died Wednesday night. All except the father were in night clothing and were in bed in the two-story home at 24 Franklin street. The father's body was found near a window, which he apparently had been attempting to open.

An investigation of the mishap was begun by Coroner F. J. Morgan, of Montgomery county, adding he did not know if a British subject would be assigned to the state's attorney for the county.

Attorney's Conclude Arguments in Sanity Trial of Mrs. Mansfeld

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3 (AP)—

Attorneys concluded arguments this afternoon in the sanity trial of Mrs. Annie Irene Mansfeld, who pleaded insanity by reason of insanity in the slaying of Mrs. Vada Martin, whom the defendant believed was stealing the love of her husband, Dr. John Mansfeld.

Mrs. Mansfeld's insanity plea will be decided by the same jury which two weeks ago found her guilty of manslaughter in the slaying.

If she is found insane Mrs. Mansfeld faces the probability of commitment to an institution. If the jury decides she is sane, the San Francisco society matron is subject to a prison sentence of from one to ten years.

Chief Executive Urges People To Put Heat on Congress for Strike Control and Other Measures Designed To Avert Economic "Disaster"; Few Men on Key Committees Are Blamed for Holdup

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP)—President Truman tonight appealed directly to the "most powerful pressure group in the world"—the American people—to put the heat on Congress for strike control legislation and other measures which he said are designed to avert economic "disaster."

Handfuls of men on strategic congressional committees, he said, have stymied action on his legislative program designed to steer the nation between the dangers of inflation and deflation toward the goal of "full production and full employment."

Nearly 1,000 Attend "Y" Open House Event

Nearly 1,000 persons attended the New Year's day open house at the Central YMCA, including 516 Rec club members and guests at a dance sponsored by the club from 9 p. m. until midnight, according to Robert L. Sisson, general RMCA secretary.

Door prizes won by Barbara Carlson and Joan Cooksey, who took part in a program presented by Girl Scout carolers in the afternoon, were two one-year memberships in the grammar school girls' group at the "Y."

Bowling prizes were won by Mrs. Carol Hardin, with a score of 136, and John Lookabaugh, with a high score for men of 187.

Events held during the afternoon included a swimming tournament, bowling, basketball games, movies, carol singing, and a recital by the Duke Memorial Bible class orchestra.

Mrs. William M. Somerville loaned her silver service for tea, served by a committee of the YMCA ladies auxiliary headed by Mrs. Jessie White. Mrs. George N. Phillips loaned a tablecloth, and punch and cake were donated by Mrs. L. J. Lanich.

Tires of Big Cars Are Not Plentiful

According to statements made yesterday by Cumberland tire dealers, the end of rationing will not be of much help to owners of larger automobiles, which use larger size tires. The dealers pointed out that there is only a limited supply of tires for passenger cars and all are for the smaller and popular priced machines.

Many of the dealers assert it will be several months before they can obtain sufficient stocks to meet the demand. One dealer reported he had been swamped with orders, and it looks like "our stock will be gone by next week."

Another dealer reported he had tires, but not for passenger cars. Many of the tires now available are not of standard size, but there are plenty of truck tires in stock here.

It was pointed out yesterday that the fact that the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company is located here will not mean that the local car owners will benefit any more than an automobile owner in other areas, as the Kelly firm must fill its orders from all over the world.

Big Russia Defied

By Little Turkey

AT ABOUT THE TIME the recently-concluded conference between Molotov, Bevin and Byrnes got under way, an article appeared in Pravda, official mouthpiece of the Kremlin, expounding the view that Turkey should be forced to cede territory on the shores of the Black Sea to Russia. The strip of land was described as 180 miles long and seventy-five miles wide. The reason given by the writers, two "intellectuals" of the territory in question, was that the land formerly belonged to Russia and had been wickedly acquired by the Turks.

The interesting thing about this published demand was not in its being made but in the reception it got from the government of Little Turkey. The world has become accustomed to red demands for territory since the European war was won. Prior to that time it was accustomed to red demands for territory from neighbors in published explanations of why they were necessary or right. So there was nothing new about the demand.

But there is something new and very refreshing about the reply made to Big Russia by Little Turkey. "For one inch of Turkish territory," says the Turks, "all Turkey is ready to throw itself into the fire."

Nobody knows better than those Turks that they wouldn't last more than a month against the might of Russia, yet judging by the canniness with which the Ankara government stayed out of the war with fighting going on all around for years, there is a possibility that Turkey will get away with their brush talking back to the Kremlin and that the seizure of Turkish territory will not be made.

What the Turks are depending upon, of course, is not their armed forces but on the force of public opinion. They probably reason that with all the "heat" Russia is now taking from world opinion, because of Stalin's policy of talking plausibly while acquiring territory from his neighbors, that he simply will not have the nerve to carry out the threat his henchmen suggested in their Pravda article. Perhaps they underestimate the Muscovite fuch-

Relief Is in Sight
For Stranded Vets

SOME CHEER FOR THE SERVICEMEN marooned on the Pacific Coast by the shortage of rail transportation facilities, the number is estimated variously at from 130,000 to 170,000 — can be found in the statement made by Senator Mead, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the national defense program. The lame he says, without revealing his authority — will be relieved during the next month.

This is not the best of news for the veterans who have already been held up for days or weeks in Western ports and who apparently can't hope for transportation for some time longer. But they will have no alternative to exercise of additional patience for Senator Mead reports that the railroads are doing all they can to solve the problem and are, in fact, to be commended for "a magnificent job."

It is interesting to note that the Office of Defense Transportation and the army and navy did take some steps to lighten the burden on the railroads. During the holiday season the movement of war prisoners and of Mexican laborers was stopped, thus freeing the facilities involved. Moreover, arrangements have now been made to have Canadian lines carry some American troops eastward.

So it seems a fair assumption that if the situation now existing had been foreseen it would at least have been less serious.

Surgeon of Bataan
Dies in Hospital

THE WAR is still taking its toll of the men who bore the physical and mental strain of combat. The latest of these deadly casualties is Col. James W. Duckworth, the heroic surgeon of Bataan who died of heart attack at Atlanta, Ga., where he was the commanding officer of Lawson General Hospital.

Col. Duckworth, who left civilian practice to serve in the First World War and remained in the army to become one of the outstanding figures of World War II, upheld under the most trying circumstances the best traditions of the army medical service.

This man, who combined the finest traits of a physician and a regular army officer, held his unit together by sheer force of character and continued on his job of saving lives. The instinct of command was in him, and even the Japs recognized it and obeyed. Asked once whether he had any trouble with the Japanese, he smiled and said: "Well, the first guards were pretty hard, but then they sent in some replacements and I trained them. Japs aren't tough. You just have to train the so-and-sos."

When the Japs ordered his hospital sent to Camp O'Donnell where Filipino prisoners were dying by the thousands in a cholera epidemic, a Japanese officer advised Col. Duckworth to leave his outfit and go to Tarlac where the ranking American commanders were being held. Col. Duckworth, who left civilian practice to serve in the First World War and remained in the army to become one of the outstanding figures of World War II, upheld under the most trying circumstances the best traditions of the army medical service.

Just imagine what a lot of aches and pains the practice of this rule would eliminate. There would be no strife between capital and labor, for each would try and see that the other got a square deal. There would be universal courtesy, and people everywhere would try to understand one another. That wouldn't be bad, would it?

Also imagine what a sensation would be caused throughout the world if the "Big Three" upon meeting, should say, as one man, "Let's see what there is in this Golden Rule proposition." If they should decide that it had a lot to offer and was worth testing, they wouldn't have to worry the world over any atomic bomb, or any other creation of hell. They would just have a nice, friendly talk and then go home and tell the folks that it was a mighty fine world, after all, and that no more boys would have to be sacrificed to greed and selfishness.

I would like to see the whole world get old fashioned again, like it was when I was a boy — when a world was what we suggested a bad dream. Yes, sir, I am old fashioned. I think that the Golden Rule is the greatest proposition ever suggested. Its practice would change the heart of the world. There would be no worry about fear then!

"Perhaps so," replied the colonel, "but where my boys go I'm going." And, despite orders and protests, he went to O'Donnell. You go to O'Donnell, you die.

"Perhapse so," replied the colonel, "but where my boys go I'm going." And, despite orders and protests, he went to O'Donnell. What could the Japs do against a man like that?

The Lambs Are Back
In Stock Market

MEMBERS of the New York Exchange are worried about the lambs. In the language of the stock market, the lambs are the little fellows who risk their few dollars blindly and nearly always lose their money. The dictionary says a lamb, according to this definition of the word, is "one who speculates amateurishly."

The piling up of savings at low interest, the absence of needed goods from the market, and reports of a boom in business have excited the gambling instinct of many people who know nothing about sound investment in corporation shares.

These natives are coming into the market with enough money and enough recklessness to upset normal trading. Their influence is helping to boost prices regardless of the yield of shares or the possibility of yield.

The Stock Exchange members are also worried about themselves.

They remember the boom market of 1929, when 8,000,000 people were speculating. The inevitable collapse wiped nearly all of them out and the political consequences were a federal law imposing severe restrictions on trading.

The law calls for higher margins and certain cash transactions in an effort to discourage the lambs. But there is no way to keep a man with money from buying and selling shares.

Probably the efforts of the Stock Exchange to discourage speculation by the little man will fail. It is in the nature of some men to take a chance with their money. The vast sums gambled on horse racing, in pool numbers games and slot machines are a measure of yearning for excitement and easy and quick games. The lambs are back and inviting the shearing which they will experience.

The interesting thing about this published demand was not in its being made but in the reception it got from the government of Little Turkey. The world has become accustomed to red demands for territory since the European war was won. Prior to that time it was accustomed to red demands for territory from neighbors in published explanations of why they were necessary or right. So there was nothing new about the demand.

But there is something new and very refreshing about the reply made to Big Russia by Little Turkey. "For one inch of Turkish territory," says the Turks, "all Turkey is ready to throw itself into the fire."

Nobody knows better than those

Turks that they wouldn't last more than a month against the might of Russia, yet judging by the canniness with which the Ankara government stayed out of the war with fighting going on all around for years, there is a possibility that Turkey will get away with their brush talking back to the Kremlin and that the seizure of Turkish territory will not be made.

What the Turks are depending upon, of course, is not their armed forces but on the force of public opinion. They probably reason that with all the "heat" Russia is now taking from world opinion, because of Stalin's policy of talking plausibly while acquiring territory from his neighbors, that he simply will not have the nerve to carry out the threat his henchmen suggested in their Pravda article. Perhaps they underestimate the Muscovite fuch-

Big Russia Defied By Little Turkey

AT ABOUT THE TIME the recently-concluded conference between Molotov, Bevin, and Byrnes got under way, an article appeared in Pravda, official mouthpiece of the Kremlin, expounding the view that Turkey should be forced to cede territory on the shores of the Black Sea to Russia. The strip of land was described as 180 miles long and seventy-five miles wide. The reason given by the writers, two "intellectuals" of the territory in question, was that the land formerly belonged to Russia and had been wickedly acquired by the Turks.

The interesting thing about this published claim was not in its being made but in the reception it got from the government of Little Turkey. The world has become accustomed to rearm demands for territory since the European war was won. Prior to that time it was accustomed to Hitler's technique of forecasting seizures of territories from neighbors in published explanations of why they were necessary or right. So there was nothing new about the demand.

But there is something new and very refreshing about the reply made to Big Russia by Little Turkey. "For one inch of Turkish territory," says the Turks, "all Turkey is ready to throw itself into the fire."

Nobody knows better than those Turks that they wouldn't last more than a month against the might of Russia, yet judging by the canines with which the Ankara government stayed out of the war with fighting going on all around for years, there is a possibility that Turkey will get away with her brash taunting back to the Kremlin and that the seizure of Turkish territory will not be made.

What the Turks are depending upon, of course, is not their armed forces but on the force of public opinion. The probably reason that with all the "heat" Russia is now taking from world opinion because of Stalin's policy of taking plumb while acquiring territory from his neighbors, that he simply will not have the nerve to carry out the theft his henchmen suggested in their Pravda article. Perhaps they underestimate the Muscovite fury.

Relief Is in Sight For Stranded Vets

SOME CHEER FOR THE SERVICEMEN marooned on the Pacific Coast by the shortage of rail transportation facilities — the number is estimated variously at from 130,000 to 170,000 — can be found in the statement made by Senator Mead, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the national defense program. The jam he says — with our revealing his authority — will be relieved during the next month.

This is not the best of news for the veterans who have already been held up for days or weeks in Western ports and who apparently can not hope for transportation for some time longer. But they will have no alternative to exercise of additional patience for Senator Mead reports that the railroads are doing all they can to solve the problem and are, in fact, to be commended for "a magnificent job."

It is interesting to note that the Office of Defense Transportation and the army and navy did take some steps to lighten the burden on the railroads. During the holiday season the movement of war prisoners and of Mexican laborers was stopped, thus freeing the facilities involved. Moreover, arrangements have now been made to have Canadian lines carry some American troops eastward.

So there is a fair assumption that if the situation now existing had been foreseen it would at least have been less serious.

Surgeon of Bataan Dies in Hospital

THE WAR IS still taking its toll of the men who bore the physical and mental strain of combat. The latest of these delayed casualties is Col. James W. Duckworth, the heroic surgeon of Bataan who died of a heart attack at Atlanta, Ga., where he was the commanding officer of Lawson General Hospital.

Col. Duckworth, who left civilian practice to serve in the First World War and remained in the army to become one of the outstanding figures of World War II, upheld under the most trying circumstances, the best traditions of the army medical service.

This man, who combined the finest traits of a physician and a regular army officer, held his unit together by sheer force of character and continued on his job of saving lives. The instinct of command was in him and even the Japs recognized it and asked once whether he had any trouble with the Japanese. He smiled and said: "Well, the first guards were pretty hard, but then they sent in some replacements and I trained them. Japs aren't tough. You just have to train the so-and-sos."

When the Japs ordered his hospital sent to Camp O'Donnell where Filipino prisoners were dying by the thousands in a cholera epidemic, a Japanese officer advised Col. Duckworth to leave his outfit and go to Tarlac where the ranking American commanders were being held. "Go to Tarlac," he said. "You get enough to eat there. Don't go to O'Donnell. You go to O'Donnell, you die."

"Perhaps so," replied the colonel, "but where my boys go I'm going." And, despite orders and protests, he went to O'Donnell. What could the Japs do against a man like that?

The Stock Exchange members are also worried about themselves. They remember the boom market of 1925-1929, when 8,000,000 people were speculating. The inevitable collapse wiped nearly all of them out and the political consequences were a federal law imposing severe restrictions on trading. The law calls for higher margins and certain cash transactions in an effort to discourage the lambs. But there is no way to keep a man with money from buying and selling shares.

Admitting Foreigners Won't Help Housing

ANNOUNCEMENT BY WASHINGTON that a certain number of foreigners are to be admitted to this country at stated intervals is certain to further complicate the housing situation. In New York there are vigorous protests over the number of aliens remaining in that city, after having been brought in as war refugees with the promise that they would leave when the war ended.

A large percentage have established family homes, a demand on housing already inadequate. Evidently no effort is now to be made to return these to their own lands.

Many are forestalling such action by applying for citizenship. That thousands of others will be permitted to enter indicates the United States has become the haven for countless thousands who will arrive later.

Meanwhile the housing problem becomes more acute daily. There has been a lot of talk but no definite move has been made to relieve the situation. With materials scarce and costly, and with labor demanding still higher wages, the cost of even the most modest home is beyond the purse of the average citizen, to say nothing of those who have had meager earnings because they were in uniform.

There are other serious economic problems, but none that is more pressing for solution. Homeless citizens are seldom good citizens, because they are unstable and unhappy.

Becoming Weary

THE CLOSE VOTE by which the Senate acted to extend the second war powers act by only six months instead of the year demanded by the bureaucrats reflects a tight situation in the nation. Nearly everybody would like to see price control tossed overboard.

But it is held there must be normal stocks of goods in most lines before the price reins are relinquished. There will not be normal stocks until industry has recovered and employment is high. It is ready to be thwarted in its efforts to speed production following the defeat of Japan, the nation might now be ready for the relinquishment of price controls.

But the Senate vote shows that Congress is on its toes to kick out government control and restore competitive pricing and free enterprise at the earliest possible moment.

That is good news to a country growing weary of the regimentation imposed by the British.

The fellow at the next desk says if they have both forgotten to hang any miasmatoe—the honeymoon is over.

I AM OLD FASHIONED

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

YES, sir, I am an old-fashioned man, as a small chap I was that way. My father was a minister, and I believed what he said about always being honest and upright. We had family worship each morning and evening. My father would pray, and then my mother, and then we kids would offer up a brief prayer. We knelt on the floor and put our heads close to the old wooden chairs.

It's swell to think of those early years. The Golden Rule was taught in our home and I liked it. But when you mention it these days there are those who smile and tell you that you are old-fashioned. Yet if that rule were to come into practice what a world we would have! Russia would be hugging all the other nations, and the other nations would be falling over one another to give Russia a good hug—and there would be sunshine all over the world.

Just imagine what a lot of aches and pains the practice of this rule would eliminate. There would be no strife between capital and labor, for each would try and see that the other got a square deal. There would be universal courtesy, and people everywhere would try to understand one another. That wouldn't be bad, would it?

Also imagine what a sensation would be caused throughout the world if the "Big Three" upon meeting, should say, as one man, "Let's see what there is in this Golden Rule proposition." If they should decide that it had a lot to do with the world, then they would be worth testing — they could be tested with a fast diet during a secret session of the House Rules committee called to consider the UNRRA appropriation bill.

Sen. Homer Ferguson, of Michigan, the only other Republican on the committee, maintained a strict silence through this entire discussion.

Without hesitation, Smith replied that "we could have done the job even bit as well in 1942 and brought the war to an end much sooner."

Most Republicans plausibly argued that selection of Atherton and Smith for the committee would have clear political implications since Atherton went from his Legion post in 1944 to Gov. Dewey's campaign headquarters.

WHERE SOME OF THE DIRT WENT

THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Small Meat Packers May Close if They Don't Get Price Increase, Pearson Says

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—Housewives may be in for another meat shortage as a result of a red-tape snarl between the small meat packers and the Office of Economic Stabilization.

Several weeks ago, the small meat packers went to Economic Stabilizer Judge John C. Collett, of Kansas City, whose Washington nickname is "Snuffy Smith" because he looks like the Barney Google character. They told him they wanted to give a $2-a-day increase to their employees and needed a small increase in the price of meat in order to do so. Collett told them to go ahead.

You say you're going to have his exact words? I'll catch it and I'll catch it.

So the meat packers went home, gave employees their wage increase, but now "Snuffy Smith" seems to have forgot all about the matter. The meat packers have been reminding him of it, but if they don't get action from him soon, a lot of small packing plants will have to close down.

At this point, Republican Rep. Frank Keefe, of Wisconsin, intervened. "I will not go along with any move to call Tyler Kent before this committee," he said. "I sat with him most of a whole night last week, and I can tell you that, although he has a very interesting story, it has no direct bearing upon Pearl Harbor, and why we were unprepared for the Japanese attack. That's what this committee was set up to find out about, and I for one will not waste time and energy on extraneous matters."

Keefe was seconded by Republican Rep. Bertrand Gearhart, of California, who had interviewed Kent with him.

Later, Gearhart proposed the names of former American Legion Commanders Warren Atherton and William Collier as co-counsel to succeed William Mitchell, now removed.

Sen. Scott Lucas, of Illinois, interpreted that selection of Atherton and Collier as co-counsel would have clear political implications since Atherton was re-elected to the Senate in 1944 from his Legion post in 1944 to Gov. Dewey's campaign headquarters.

Note—Lucas might also have mentioned that Col. James W. Duckworth, the heroic surgeon of Bataan, was a leader in the Alf Landon campaign in 1936.

tell her husband? Do you think it would help matters any?

Here's a letter from a woman who is considering such a move, and my answer to her. What would your answer have been?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a married woman with two lovely boys, but I'm unhappy. I found out that my husband is going out with a married woman who's supposed to be my best friend—although he denies it. If it doesn't stop soon, I guess it's my place to see her husband. What do you think of the idea? Should I go, or just let things alone?

He claims he loves me very much, and while he's home he treats me like an angel, so please tell me what to do.

A LONELY WIFE.

What do I think of the idea of your telling this woman's husband about this situation?

Well, I think it would be a great mistake. It would be far from likely that any good could come of it, and very probable indeed that it would simply make the situation worse.

You say that your husband now "treats you like an angel." Do you think for a minute that he would continue to treat you that way if you stirred up trouble with this woman's husband? Don't you think, on the other hand, that he would be so angry and resentful that he would take it out on you, and at the same time be more determined than ever to go his own way?

No fire was ever put out by pouring more fuel on it, which is just what you would be doing by adopting such a course as you suggest. It is much more likely to burn itself out if left alone.

Thousands of women have faced this type of problem and, by being strong enough and sensible enough to be guided by their heads instead of by their emotions, have weathered the storm and come out into calm matrimonial seas again.

I know it's not as easy as it sounds. It is a searing experience to have to sit helplessly by and watch the man you love, the husband who has sworn to love and cherish you, run after another woman. But if you have the strength of character, the noble patience, to see it through, avoiding, if possible, ugly scenes that will leave scars on both your hearts and memories, there are good chances that this crisis will pass, with better years ahead. In any event, you have nothing to lose by trying such a waiting policy for a reasonable length of time. If the affair goes on indefinitely, or other affairs follow that of course, is another story, calling, perhaps, for a different course of action.

But in the meantime, follow this three-point program and see what comes of it. Get as much happiness as you can from your two lovely sons; keep yourself and your home interesting and attractive; cultivate outside interests so that you won't concentrate on brooding over your problem. It may well be that when your husband sees you can make a life for yourself and your boys that doesn't revolve around him, he may be anxious to get back into the center of it again.

You say that your husband now "treats you like an angel." Do you think for a minute that he would continue to treat you that way if you stirred up trouble with this woman's husband? Don't you think, on the other hand, that he would be so angry and resentful that he would take it out on you, and at the same time be more determined than ever to go his own way?

No fire was ever put out by pouring more fuel on it, which is just what you would be doing by adopting such a course as you suggest. It is much more likely to burn itself out if left alone.

Thousands of women have faced this type of problem and, by being strong enough and sensible enough to be guided by their heads instead of by their emotions, have weathered the storm and come out into calm matrimonial seas again.

I know it's not as easy as it sounds. It is a searing experience to have to sit helplessly by and watch the man you love, the husband who has sworn to love and cherish you, run after another woman. But if you have the strength of character, the noble patience, to see it through, avoiding, if possible, ugly scenes that will leave scars on both your hearts and memories, there are good chances that this crisis will pass, with better years ahead. In any event, you have nothing to lose by trying such a waiting policy for a reasonable length of time. If the affair goes on indefinitely, or other affairs follow, that of course, is another story, calling, perhaps, for a different course of action.

But in the meantime, follow this three-point program and see what comes of it: Get as much happiness as you can from your two lovely sons; keep yourself and your home interesting and attractive, cultivate outside interests so that you won't concentrate on brooding over your problem. It may well be that when your husband sees you make a life for yourself and your boys that doesn't revolve around him, he may be anxious to get back into the center of it again.

Stocks Tilt Lower with Further Selling Based on Labor Disputes

By VICTOR EBANK

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (AP)—Stocks generally tilted lower in today's market with further selling based mainly on actual and threatened strikes throughout the nation.

Transfers totalled 1,390,000 shares, the largest since December 26 and compared with 1,050,000 Wednesday.

The automotive group came back in the final hour on rumors that the General Motors controversy might be near settlement. Many customers continued to lighten accounts on the idea a substantial technical correction was in the making.

LISTEN WORLD!

—By Elsie Robinson
Registered U. S. Patent Office

Darn that hang nail! It's gotten my goat fifty times today.

Funny things—hang-nails. Hardly any size, but they can make your whole body miserable. And gum up a day's performance. Yet they're nothing but a scrap of skin that has lost contact with your main hide and dried up into a nuisance.

People—they get like that, too. Human hang nails.

They were like everyone else to begin with—just as that hang-nail was once regular skin. Warm and eager and supple—WHILE THEY WERE IN CIRCULATION. Then something happened, that put them out of circulation. Some grief, perhaps. Or a loss or shock. Or they did something to be ashamed of. Or perhaps they just grew discouraged. Whatever it was, it cut them off. Cut them off from the enthusiasm and excitement of other human beings—from healthy conflicts and competitions—from all those quickening contacts that affect us, unconsciously, when we're living normally . . . from those contacts that stir us up and keep us alive.

So they dried up. They didn't know they were drying up. They were thinking more about themselves. Taking things harder. Feeling lonelier and madder and more tired of life every day. But they didn't realize that this was turning their characters into festering thorns that snared, every time life touched them. But it was—

You've seen them. You know them. There's at least one human hang-nail in your office, in your family. And they get your goat—how they get your goat. Making life miserable for themselves and everyone else. Can't say a word with our offending them. Why, they act as if they were the only people on earth—

As a matter of fact, they ARE. They've lost contact so much that they're clean forgotten about the other fellow. They can't feel him. They can't feel the things that happen to him. They can only feel the things that happen to themselves. Naturally they consider such things the main events in human history.

That's what happens to people when they cut themselves from life. You don't have to be nutty to get that way. You just need to be cut off. It can happen to anyone. It can happen to you. It has happened to you. You've had spells like that, when everything seemed wrong. The only thing that was wrong was you. You'd rammed off by yourself and turned into a hang-nail.

IF YOU WANT TO STAY REGULAR, STAY IN CIRCULATION. Stay with the gang and take your chance with it. It won't always be easy or pleasant. Other people just make us, double cross us sometimes—make us mad. But that's all good for us. It keeps us stirred up. IF YOU AREN'T STIRRED UP, YOU'LL WITHER UP. YOU'LL BECOME A HANG-NAIL.

Darn that hang nail! It's gotten my goat fifty times today.

Funny things—hang-nails. Hardly any size, but they can make your whole body miserable. And gum up a day's performance. Yet they're nothing but a scrap of skin that has lost contact with your main hide and dried up into a nuisance.

People—they get like that, too. Human hang nails.

Holden Arranges Meeting on Dairy Dispute Monday

Wage Issues Delay Settlement of Union Working Agreement

Negotiations on a contract between dairies of the Cumberland area and Local 924, Truck Drivers and Dairymen Workers Union, will be resumed Monday at 8 p.m., state police reported today.

State Police Cpl. Ezra Zirkle said Bryant died last night while en route to a hospital from a wound suffered in the fight.

Zirkle added that Robert Thomas, 19; Clarence Pearson, 17, and his brother, Robert Pearson, 22, negroes, all of Huntington, were held in the Logan county jail on charges of murder and of breaking and entering.

The three youths were captured on Huff mountain, Wyoming county, by three troopers from the Beckley detachment after their car stalled, Zirkle said.

Zirkle said the trio was accused of breaking into the Cranco store of the Logan County Coal Corporation and stealing $201.80 and a quantity of merchandise.

He said they then fled in the auto and a short time later took an undetermined amount of cash and merchandise from the Lundale store of the same company.

The governor said he had received a plea from Julius A. Anderson, Jr., Baltimore, to assist in speeding transportation for Mrs. Anderson and their daughter, Janet, from Brisbane, Australia.

Anderson wrote the governor he had served three and a half years overseas and married his wife in November, 1944. Afterward he left for the Philippines and their child was born October 1945.

He noted that his wife's papers were in order and that she had had a visa since October, 1945.

Gov. O'Connor wrote to the American consul at Brisbane and to the adjutant general urging him to help him put through his general program.

Company employees and constables banded together to try to prevent the robbery of a third store, all within a radius of seven miles, at Amherstdale, and Zirkle said the youths were taken by surprise and fled.

When the three returned for their automobile, the gun fight resulted and the trio escaped across the county line.

Thousands of GIs Play Nursemaid to Triplets On Atlantic Crossing

NEW YORK, Jan. 3 (AP) — Seven-month-old triplets and their war-battered mother, Mrs. Robert H. Glass, arrived today aboard the British liner Queen Mary along with 11,000 GIs who played nursemaid during the trip from England.

The union president reported a special meeting of the union will be called after Monday's negotiation session so that the union may take action on the meeting.

Kelly added that negotiations for the settlement of the dispute are in force and said there was no chance of a work stoppage at present. No action was taken at last evening's regular meeting of the union, Kelly said.

U. S. Warships

One of the criticisms leveled against them was that they failed to co-ordinate their forces for defense or to alert them against attack.

The Senate-House committee received during the day a navy report that Short and Kimmel vetoed unity of command in Hawaii in 1941 and disputed command over outlying islands.

Adm. H. K. Hewitt made these statements in a report of an investigation he conducted by direction of Secretary of the Navy Forrestal. Hewitt expressed the opinion that "more effective action" would have been taken both before and after the attack had there been unity of command.

War Made Little Change

In telling of the "shooting orders" in the Atlantic, Stark recalled that the United States started convoys to Iceland months earlier.

"We might under certain circumstances have command of British vessels or British officers might have command of ours," he related of the operations, adding that Germany's declaration of war in December made little change in the Atlantic situation.

"Was there an order for American ships to fire on German submarines?" asked Rep. Gearhart (R-Calf).

"There was."

"Who issued the order?"

"It did by direction of the president."

Stark produced a summary of Atlantic operating plans dated September 26, which had noted that approximately sixty British and Canadian destroyers and corvettes would escort convoys in the Western Atlantic under "strategic direction" of the United States.

It was noted that President Roosevelt had said in a speech September 11 that "from now on, if German or Italian vessels of war enter the waters, the protection of which is necessary for American defense, then do so at their own peril."

Plan Made Effective Oct. 11

Stark said the September 26 plan was made effective October 11.

Among other tasks it assigned to the Atlantic fleet were "protection against hostile attack United States and foreign flag shipping other than German and Italian shipping by escorting, covering, and patrolling as circumstances may require, and by destroying German and Italian naval land, and air forces encountered."

On the point of the Pearl Harbor attack, Stark said he was surprised and he believed President Roosevelt was surprised. In fact, Mr. Roosevelt told him in the summer of 1944 that he was surprised, he added.

Sen. Lucas (D-III) brought up the question of whether there was advance knowledge in Washington of Japan's intentions.

The white-haired admiral replied with a firm negative as the Illinois senator put a series of questions to whether he knew of anyone with advance knowledge of the attack plan, of anyone who "maneuvered" the Japanese-American crisis to invite attack, or who "trapped or lied" the Japanese into an attack.

Win Bronze Stars

Bronze Star holders include Robert Presutti, Coketon; Clarence Hansford, Richard P. Archer, Sam Phillips, Romaine Repair, James J. Williams, Harold S. Hershberger, and John W. Taylor, all of Parsons and Hendricks; Charles K. Bland, Thomas, also holds the bronze star with an oak leaf cluster as well as Webster Phillips of Parsons.

During the present war sixty-three Tucker county boys lost their lives in the various fields of battle.

Included in the list of discharges recorded were Catherine Folman, Piedmont, who served with the marine corps; First Lt. Lt. Ann Fleming, Thomas, with the marine corps; Second Lt. Katherine M. Parsons, Davis, with the army nurse corps; Glenda Hebb, with the WAVES; Anna Marie Gazelle and Mary Anne Gasser, both of Thomas, both with the WAVES; Mary Margaret Howatson, Parsons, daughter of Sheriff and Mrs. O. G. Howatson, with the WACs.

Car Is Stolen

Police reported last evening no trace has been found of the 1938 Plymouth car which John G. McHugh, former local policeman, reported was stolen Monday evening from a parking lot at 205 South Mechanic street.

Paris Editor Gets Life

PARIS, Jan. 3 (AP) — Guy Bunavarria, prewar editor of the newspaper Le Matin, was convicted of collaboration by a purge court today and sentenced to life imprisonment. He was accused of aiding Nazi propaganda with his newspaper during the German occupation of France.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 (AP) — President Truman today signed the bill establishing a department of medicine and surgery in the Veterans' Administration.

At the same time, he sent a letter to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, VA administrator, urging him to give priority to qualified veterans in recruiting physicians, dentists and nurses.

He also told Bradley to "provide against any possibility of discrimination because of race or creed."

Civil Service officials had opposed the legislation because it gives VA authority to organize its own staff of doctors and nurses without regard to Civil Service regulations.

Mr. Truman made no mention of this opposition.

The president had until midnight to act on the bill.

Chinese residents of Meester Cornelis whose homes were destroyed said the fires were set by an officer of the Kempei Tai (thought police) to a member of the cabinet, of the privy council and the House of Peers.

The fires raged throughout the night and were brought under control and extinguished early in the day by Indonesian fire brigades.

In the neighboring island of Sumatra, the Dutch news agency Aneta quoted the native Republican governor as saying: Allied officers burned down more than 200 houses at Padang, following the slaying of Padang, the third marriage for both the slender, honey-haired star and the greying, slightly-balding Markey. The bridegroom was an intelligence officer with Halsey when the latter commanded the Third fleet. Markey now is on terminal leave.

The fact that Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, of Lonaconing, is among the twenty-one players nominated for Baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., is the occasion for reviewing some of the pitching feats credited to the southpaw who toiled in the American League for seventeen years—nine with the Philadelphia Athletics and eight with the Boston Red Sox.

Perhaps his outstanding performances should be topped by the fact that he led the American League in earned run percentage for nine seasons—1926, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1935, 1936, 1938, and 1939. His greatest year was with Connie Mack's club in 1931 when he won 30 games, lost 5 and turned in the remarkable low earned run record of 2.06 runs per nine inning game. He figured in 41 contests and pitched in 289 innings.

Jack-Reif Bout To Be Broadcast At 10 Tonight

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—When Kate Smith goes on the air via CBS Friday night she will have a studio audience again. This is a change in policy, for she had gone so far this season without visible guests, apparently on the theory that that would permit greater concentration on the microphone.

But broadcasting on ABC at 10 will go back to lightweights, they being Beau Jack, of Augusta, Ga., and Morris Reif, of Brooklyn. The usual ten rounds are scheduled, unless—

MBS is to swing its So You Think You Know Music quiz from 10 o'clock to 8:30, the spot vacated in the transfer of Freedom of Opportunity to Sunday nights. No change in the format of the Ted Cott conducted quiz.

Friday night, like most of the others on the radio, has its full quota of guests. An example therefore is the visit of Mary Roberts Rinehart, mystery story writer for many a year, to Mystery Theater of NBC at 10. She will seek to ferret out a solution to "The Blind Spot," a story, as originally written, that did not solve the crime.

Along comes Ginny Simms at 7:30 on CBS again, borrowing the talent of Eddie Cantor, who thus is turning guest. This program will come from New York instead of the usual Hollywood. Farther along the CBS schedule is the Danny Kaye show at 10:30, guesting this time Betty Hutton, blonde of the songs. Also over on MBS there is Spotlight Bands at 9:30, another guest show, which has announced Bob Crosby, who this week began a new CBS series, to bring along his orchestra.

Ridgeley Flood Control Meeting Tentatively Set

Town's Part in Project Will Be Discussed on January 15

A meeting to discuss Ridgeley's part in the proposed flood control project for Cumberland and Ridgeley has been tentatively set for Tuesday, January 15, at 8 p.m. in the Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club building, Mayor Odert Poling said last night.

Mayor Poling said army engineers have been asked to come to Ridgeley at that time to give residents of the community a detailed explanation of the project as it affects them.

The total overall cost of the project has been estimated at $8,500,000, of which Cumberland's share will be $910,000 and Ridgeley's share $45,000.

Although Mayor Thomas S. Post and the city council of Cumberland unanimously approved a resolution December 29 pledging co-operation in the "final stage" of the flood control project, Mayor Poling said at that time he preferred to wait until the engineers explained the project to Ridgeley residents before committing his community to a definite course of action.

Cumberland officials approved the resolution the same day that a meeting was held here with army engineers to acquaint local residents with details of the project.

Mayor Poling said that the same engineers have been asked to speak at the Ridgeley meeting. They include Col. D. G. White, district engineer of the United States Engineer Office, Washington, D. C.; Lt. Col. Byron Bird, assistant district engineer of the United States Engineer Office; and D. V. C. Burrell, senior engineer of the corps of engineers, United States Engineer Office.

Mayor Post and the city council will be invited to attend the meeting as soon as the date is definitely set, Mayor Poling said.

Rainfall in City Last Year Was Above Normal

Rainfall in Cumberland last year was above normal according to official measurements recorded at the city hall. Precipitation for 1945 measured 36.92 inches as compared to a normal of 35.28. In 1944 the figure was 34.96, just slightly under the average, while in 1943 the figure was 29.16, the seventh driest of seventy-five years.

In contrast to the above records, 1942 had 55.89 inches, the fourth wettest ever noted here.

Made Show Start

Although 1945 was a better than normal year the final result came about in the opposite of the average way. Under normal conditions precipitation for the first six months totals 18.57 inches while last year it was 16.87. The second six months accounted for 26.05 inches as compared to a normal 18.71.

The heavy precipitation the second half accounts for the fact that Charles J. Bruce, waterworks superintendent, reported water flowed over both Lakes Gordon and Koon during the Christmas season for the first time in the 16 years he has been here.

Last year had seven months with a below normal fall. The months above average were April, June, August, September and November.

November Near Record

November with a normal of 1.95 inches, the driest month of the year, had 4.15 inches. It was the wettest November since 1926 and the fifth wettest in recorded history.

October with 5.4 inch was the driest last year and the measurement for that month was the lowest since the 9.2 inch of December, 1943.

For the past four years precipitation has averaged 36 inches or slightly above normal.

The records for the past three years and the normal follow:

Month	1945	1944	1943	Normal

All members of the armed forces are available. They will have to be mailed to the state office in Baltimore, from which all allotments will be issued. Any other type of application forms must be secured from the state OPA office in Baltimore, local officials said.

Officials announced that the only forms which will be available by mail or in person at the local office are: R-146, application for a new ration book (in reality only a sugar book); R-194, application for replacement for lost, stolen or mutilated books; R-353, application for temporary sugar allotment for the use of furloughed service men.

Only the application forms are available. They will have to be mailed to the state office in Baltimore, from which all allotments will be issued. Any other type of application forms must be secured from the state OPA office.

From a group of employees which numbered a score or more at the height of rationing, only five clerks were on duty today. They will be associated entirely with the OPA efforts to maintain price control.

The Rationing Board started as a rationing agency in January, 1942, and gradually took on a wide scope of activities as automobiles, sugar, coffee, fuel oil, gasoline, typewriters, bicycles, meat and many types of canned food and produce went on the ration list. The end of 1945 found only sugar remaining to be rationed.
